CERF annual reports indicate that many of us are not having our puppies' eyes examined. There are many reasons why some breeders do not make puppy eye exams a routine part of their breeding program. It is not our job to say who is right or wrong. Our job is to help breeders understand why these exams are very important, not only to the individual breeder but to the breed as a whole.

Let's first address congenital cataracts and the somewhat popular belief that it is a problem of the past. Perhaps this defect was eliminated from our gene pool by the dedicated efforts of the breeders who were willing to test-breed away from the problem in the not-so-distant past.. Certainly, their efforts at least greatly reduced the frequency of the gene in the gene pool. Statistically, it is almost impossible to completely eradicate a recessive gene from a population without a DNA test. Breeders can help reduce the risk of this problem resurfacing and spreading before being noticed - by having puppy eye exams.

Recently there have been reports of unilateral and bilateral cataracts in young adult dogs. It is unclear at this time whether these "juvenile" cataracts are diagnostically distinguishable from congenital cataracts. Juvenile cataracts are thought to sometimes develop in one eye and later develop in the other eye. For a dog with a unilateral cataract the issue is confusing enough. But for an adult dog with bilateral cataracts, that has not had a puppy eye exam, getting an accurate diagnosis can be a lengthy and costly process. Breeders can help prevent misdiagnosis, save time and money, and know what defect they are dealing with - by having puppy eye exams.

Now consider that there are other eye defects that occur in our breed. At the Oct 2001 board meeting Catherine McMillan brought to our attention the issue of retinal dysplasia. This defect is known to be inherited in several other breeds and evidence provided to the health committee suggests this may be the case in our breed as well. Retinal dysplasia can be found in three forms; retinal folds, geographic dysplasia, and retinal detachment. The defect results in varying degrees of vision loss with detachment resulting in blindness. All three forms can occur in the same litter. Folds may be mild to severe, with mild folds appearing to improve with age. A puppy with mild folds may have a normal adult eye exam, so without a puppy exam the breeder might never be aware of the problem.

It is possible that a more severely affected puppy might not act suspiciously, as puppies with vision impairment often adapt to their surroundings and/or follow their littermates to navigate their environment. The earliest indication that there might be a problem could be when the puppy goes to his new home and he no longer has the security of his littermates or familiar surroundings. Unfortunately, this is when the defect becomes the buyer's problem.

The breeders currently working to uncover the genetics of retinal dysplasia have commented that had they not been performing routine puppy eye exams this problem might have gone unnoticed for some time. Their discovery was not based on a suspicious puppy, but on routine eye exam re-continued on p. 2, column 2...EYE EXAMS

We are still trying to put together an AMSC cookbook. Perhaps you will be inspired to send a recipe or two to June Shanklin if you see a few recipes in AMSCOPE

BISCOTTE (always great for the Holidays)

8 cups of flour
3 1/3 cups sugar
6 tsps baking soda

*SIFT DRY INGREDIENTS

*ADD

4 tsps Almond Extract
4 tsps vanilla
12 large eggs

* MIX WELL

* ADD

4 cups whole almonds with skins

* MIX WELL and turn out onto floured table
* DIVIDE dough into 3 parts and divide each into 3 parts
* ROLL each of the nine pieces into a long roll that will fit lengthwise on a cookie sheet
* BUTTER three cookie sheets and place 3 rolls of dough on each sheet
* BAKE in 350° until firm and golden brown.
* REMOVE from oven and slice into 1/2" to 3/4" slices. Put the slices back on the cookie sheet and put back into the oven (now 300°). Turn the slices as needed until they are dry and hard.

ENJOY!

sults. Breeders can more easily identify a potential problem before it becomes a larger problem - by having puppy eye exams.

What about CERF? If you cannot get CERF exams, get exams performed by a veterinary ophthalmologist, preferably board certified. CERF exams help the organization gather important statistical information, but getting the exam is most important. If you do get CERF exams, you don't have to send your form in if you choose not to: the ophthalmologist automatically sends in a statistical copy, so the stats are recorded with CERF but the individual dog is not. If you want to send in your individual CERF form and have the dog registered there are advantages, such as the CERF number appearing on registration forms and the dog's exam recorded in AKC Awards.

There are several other eye anomalies that are monitored by CERF statistically. Although currently their incidence may not be significant, tracking of these defects is very important as an upswing in the number of reportable cases of a defect might assist CERF in investigation of the problem. In addition, scientists and researchers sometimes use statistical information from databases to identify health issues within and across breeds for potential research opportunities.

Try to get exams done anywhere from 8-12 weeks of age. From a statistical position show and pet puppies alike should have an eye exam if possible. Breeders should consider the information they may gain when deciding whether or not to examine all puppies. For example - a litter of 5 pups is evaluated and 2 are kept as show prospects. If the 3 pet pups don't have an exam, that amounts to 60% of the litter for which no basic information is known. If even 1 of the 3 pets had been examined and found to have an irregularity, the breeder would know to watch for this problem. If even 1 of the 3 had been diagnosed with an inherited disorder the breeder would have been able to advise the buyer as to the condition, and importantly determine the ancestors' and the 2 show puppies' risk for being carriers and breed away from the problem in their breeding program.

Special Note - The 8-12 week exam age is recommended for routine exams. Several ophthalmologists recommend this age range. Exams before 8 weeks of age can be more difficult due to size of the eye, and results can be ambiguous due to developmental issues. If in your breeding program you are dealing with a particular eye issue, please consult your VO for optimum exam age.

FINDING HOMEOWNER'S INSURANCE

AKC Bulletin

Did you know that in most states it is legal for insurance companies to charge homeowners higher premiums or refuse to renew a policy based solely on the owner's breed of dog? Surprising as it may sound, more and more dog owners are being told they will be dropped by their insurance carrier if they refuse to give up their dog, even if they are long-time customers and their dog has never bitten or attacked anyone.

Homeowners with dogs could face even more difficulty obtaining insurance in coming months, for two reasons. First, media coverage of summer dog bites may draw negative attention to the issue, causing carriers to raise a red warning flag on all customers who own dogs. Second, some insurance agents have become more wary of dog owners in light of last year's dog mauling case in San Francisco. Jurors in the case found the dog owner guilty of second-degree murder because they believed she knew her dog to be dangerous but did nothing to properly restrain the animal from harming someone. The verdict could have a negative impact on dog owners as landlords and insurance companies nationwide reevaluate liability issues concerning dog ownership. Some dog owners have already reported having trouble obtaining insurance.

So what's a responsible dog owner to do? Below are some tips on finding homeowner's insurance, ✓ Shop around. Ask your dog-owning friends which company they use and if they have had problems. Your dog's national breed club may also have suggestions.

✓ Contact the insurance commissioner in your state. The phone number can be found in the state government section of the blue pages of your phone book. The commissioner can provide you with a list of all insurance companies doing business in your state. Work your way down the list to find out who can provide you with coverage that best suits your needs. When you speak to the commissioner, share your frustration over companies' discriminatory practices.

✓ Agents within the same company may have different policies. Talk to more than one representative of a particular carrier before giving up.

✓ Contact your state senator or representative. Discuss your insurance problems and suggest that he or she introduce legislation prohibiting insurance companies from discriminating against homeowners based on the breed of dog they own. The Canine Legislation department has materials to assist you in these efforts.

✓ As a last resort, consider buying a separate liability policy or separate rider to your existing policy that is specifically directed to your dogs.

Insurance Companies' Policies on Dogs

Despite the fact that animal welfare and behavior experts all agree that there's no such thing as a bad breed, many insurers are adopting "blacklists" of dogs they refuse to cover. The AKC believes that insurance companies should determine coverage of a dog-owning household based on the dog's deeds, not the dog's breed. If a dog is a well-behaved member of the household and the community, there is no reason to deny or cancel coverage. In fact, insurance companies should consider a dog an asset, a natural alarm system whose bark may deter intruders and prevent potential theft.

Below is some information AKC has compiled from insurance companies, industry associations, and media reports.

INSURER	"BAD BREEDS" BLACKLIST?	COMMENTS
Allstate	Yes - pitt bulls, Staffordshire Terriers, Dobermans, Rottweilers, Chows, Presa Canarios, Akitas, wolf-hybrids, and Huskies	No new policies will be written for owners of these breeds.
AIG	Yes - pit bulls, Dobermans, Rottweilers
Axa	Yes
Clarendon	Yes
Farmers Insurance Group	No	Prospective policyholders are asked to report whether they have a "vicious animal" on the premises. Once there is a claim, the pet is specifically excluded from the coverage. The company will not take new business from people who have had a dog-bite claim in the last three years, even if the family no longer owns the pet
Liberty Mutual	Yes- Akitas, Alaskan Malamutes, Chows, Dobermans, German Shepherds, pit bulls or Staffordshire Terriers, Rottweilers, Siberian Huskies, Presa Canarios	Mixed-breed dogs have to be verified by a veterinarian not to be predominantly any of these breeds before policy will be issued.
Mercury Casualty Company	No	Offers 10% discount for families that don't own a dog or are willing to take the dog off their policy.
Nationwide	Yes - Rottweilers, Dobermans, pit bulls, Presa Canarios, chows or wolf-hybrids
Prudential	No	May vary from state to state
Qualsure Insurance Corp	Yes - Akitas, Chows, Dobermans, pit bulls, Presa Canarios, Rottweilers
State Farm	No	If there has been a bite history, the company will ask that the offending dog be removed from the home ed's note. The above list is from the AKC but it is far from complete. My own homeowners insurance was cancelled because I breed dogs - the breed did not matter. The fact that I had had their insurance for 10 years and never had a claim, did not matter.

AVOID THE RUSH! RENEW NOW!

We all do a little procrastinating....and it seems that Club membership dues get the brunt of the procrastinations.

This year...please remember to renew on time.

Single Membership	$20.00
(U.S./Canada)
Couple	$35.00
(one AMSCOPE)
Foreign	$26.00

Make check payable to AMSC and remit to:
Gerald Kyser
310 Brookridge Drive
Camden, AR 71701-3106

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE: The following information is given to help conduct AMSC business more efficiently. Please remember that the Secretary and the AMSCOPE editor should BOTH be notified of address changes, club officers and specialty results.
