MICROCHIPS, LOST AND FOUND

In troubled times the identification of dogs and cats has become extremely important. The Katrina victims and many of their lost dogs and cats have no identification and are estimated to exceed 50,000. If they had been microchipped and enrolled in the AKC Companion Animal Recovery (AKC CAR) database, most would have been returned to their owners. AKC CAR is a non-profit organization and affiliate of the American Kennel Club. Each owners name, address and telephone number are linked to their pets unique identification number, whether it is a microchip, tattoo, or AKC CAR issued collar tag. Very few owners in the disaster zone expected to lose their dog/cats. In retrospect they now wish they had enrolled in AKC/CAR who provides recovery services 24 hours a day, 365 days a year and reunites an owner with their lost pet every 7 minutes. <<http://www.akccar.org>>www.akccar.org

AKC CAR has a highly-regarded philanthropic history, donating for veterinary school scholarships, animal rescue efforts during times of national disasters as well as the donation of microchip scanners to non-profit shelters and rescue organizations around the country.

Breeders that have dog/cats microchipped and not enrolled in AKC/CAR can enroll them on-line <<http://www.akccar.org>>www.akccar.org

PROGRESS MADE IN DETERMINATION OF HERITABLE RISK FACTORS FOR CANINE LYMPHOMA

Researchers have announced that prevalence of B-cell and T-cell lymphomas among certain dog breeds indicates heritable risk (Cancer Research, Vol 65, No. 13, July 2005). This research, led by Drs. Jaime Modiano, University of Colorado Health Sciences Center, and Matthew Breen, North Carolina State University, was possible in part by grants made by the Canine Health Foundation to study lymphoma in several breeds, and has been sponsored by 21 breed clubs, corporations, and individuals.

According to Modiano and Breen, The predisposition of certain breeds to develop lymphoma has been recognized for a long time, but this is the first indication that the tumors themselves harbor breed-specific genetic abnormalities. This opens new avenues for investigation that will help us to identify specific genes that contribute to the risk of lymphoma in dogs, and possibly in people.

Cancer risk has long been believed to have heritable components. However, genes that may be causally related to sporadic cancers such as non-Hodgkins lymphoma have been difficult to pinpoint. This research shows that the prevalence of B-cell and T-cell lymphomas differs among dog breeds. Additionally, it determined that these different prevalence rates are shared among dog breeds that are closely related. The article in the publication Cancer Research states &these results indicate that recurrent genetic abnormalities that occur with significantly higher frequency in a single dog breed can assist in the identification of candidate genes that may be associated with the origin or progression of both canine and human cancers.

Dogs make an excellent model to study heritability factors in cancer. According to the investigators, The limited level of genetic heterogeneity within dog breeds, combined with the fact that the incidence and lifetime risk of naturally occurring (disease) differs among dog breeds, offers a unique opportunity to identify genetic risk factors that contribute to the pathogenesis of (disease).

Rocket was the winningest B/S in Canada, and the number # 1 MS in Canada in 1998. Rocket was my first real show dog. My first year showing dogs was his campaign year - and I was hooked by the thrill. While winning was certainly great, for me, Rocket's greatest moments were 'slumming it' around the house. His serious ring demeanor was quickly shed out in the yard with a squeak toy that needed murdering. He was a terrific little dog, and I am forever grateful to have had the chance to know him.

Here's to you!
